

Short-Chain PFAS and GenX

Short-chain PFAS, unlike long-chain PFAS, are still permitted and are widely used in place of the phased-out long-chain chemicals.

GenX is a chemical process that serves as a “replacement” for PFOA. Beginning in 2009, DuPont began commercial manufacture of Gen-X as a replacement for PFOA. The Chemours Company now manufactures and uses GenX.